CONDITIONS NOW INTOLERABLE

Special Cable to the Monitor from its European Bureau

LONDON-The Monitor's special representative in Dublin, has been received by the lord mayor, who has authorized him to state in his name that he does not consider Lord Aberdeen's promise of a private inquiry sufficient, and that nothing short of a public inquiry will satisfy him. If this is not granted he declares he will hold one himself.

He admitted that there was no legal provision for such an inquiry, but he could, he pointed out, invite evidence from citizens of repute. In such case he felt certain that evidence would be given of a would compel the government to grant a full, open investigation. A feature of the situation, which of all things is regarded as most significant, is the total silence of the Roman Catholic hierarchy. This silence was described to the Monitor's representative by one of the foremost politicians, himself a man of undoubted impartiality, as the beginning of the end. Larkinism, this gentleman added, is at its root, the first half-conscious rebellion against the mental despotism of the church of Rome.

A prominent English labor man had told him, he continued, at the moment of his leaving the city that the lower grade of Dublin labor was the most poverty-stricken thing he knew. Twenty thousand families lived in one room to a family, with the result that the poverty and vice engendered was indescribable. Respectable Dublin workers had completely left the city for the suburbs. Rates were absolutely enormous, and the corporation was entirely unequal to dealing with the conditions. It was these conditions which made the present outbreak a desperate fight for escape from something intolerable.

No one, he told the Monitor represent. Speaker at Unionist Meeting at merce. ative, could possibly see to the end. The position was simply chaos and perhaps the most dangerous in the history of the country. On the surface it was Larkin for the worker against the employer. (Continued on page two, column six)

An interesting development has recently taken place in the government of this great city. Owing to the peculiar conditions under which British India is administered it has not hitherto been found possible to concede full powers of self-government to a capital the overwhelming majority of whose inhabitants are Hindus and Muhammadans.

At the same time, owing to the spread of education and of western democratic ideas it has not been considered desirable to maintain a purely autocratic or bureaucratic system, and hence substituted in the corporation, which will be presided over by a non-official chairman of the served whole in matters will be debated upon the municipal corporation, half of upon the string from a membership of Hassall Green school, about the six wiles away.

This failed to mollify either children or parents and instead of the children and instead of the children morning day about 200 of them were lined up by their parents and marched through the village with flags and banners. The latter bore such inscriptions as "We want juste for Mr. Owen; send him back again and we will then go back to school."

Less urgent matters will be debated not inscriptions as "We want juste for Mr. Owen; send him back again and we will then go back to school."

This railed to do the country justice. Senator Dillingham Makes Plea for

His Amendment to Tariff Bill Providing Devoting of Proceeds From Income Tax to Better Highways Is Defeated

BIG WEEK IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON - Senator Dillingham started today's tariff session of the Senate by arguing for his amendment which proposes to devote the proceeds of the income tax to the building of good roads. He criticized adversely the income tax section of the bill, especially because of its exemption of small incomes. Everyone who participates in the benefits of the government, he urged, should contribute something, however small, to its maintenance. He argued that the income tax should be collected by the states to avoid double taxation.

Speaking to Senator Norris' inheritance tax amendment to the tariff bill, Senator Gallinger said the law ought to differentiate between those fortunes honestly acquired and those dishonestly acquired. Senator Works, saying he was in sympathy with the purpose to curb large fortunes, urged that the remedy should prevent such accumulation and session of it. The latter course would not be justice he said.

Senator Dillingham modified his amendment so as to divert the funds to this purpose for a period of two years only. And to revert to the federal treasury

CARMAN SAYS COMPANY BACKS HIS CONTENTION

Harry A. Nash, Extra Conductor, Says Loss of Day's Pay Through Alleged Injustice of Stationmaster Was Made up.

OTHER DETAILS TOLD

Out of a line of seven carmen who stood before the board of arbitration James J. Storrow, in Ford hall today at the opening of the continued hearing on the differences between the Boston Elevated Company and its employees, Harry A. Nash was chosen as the first witness by John P. Feeney, counsel for the Boston Carmen's Union

Mr. Nash was an extra conductor with 15 months' service to his credit. One instance that he related in support of contention that the stationmaster prevented the men from earning as much per day as they might was an occasion last spring while he was waiting in the

He was the first man "on the bell" and was detailed to shift a car about 13 minutes before it was time, he said. While sitting in the lobby, he said, a man rating below him on the list was 10 minutes before it was time for him to shift his car.

Upon complaint to the station master, he was told that he had already been detailed. Taking his objection to the superintendent the latter agreed with him that he had been wrongly treated, according to the witness. This resulted in Mr. Nash being paid for a day's work by the company.

As the guarantee of $12 a week Nash said that a man often let his day's proportion of the guarantee go because he did not want to keep long hours. A man who reports at 5 o'clock in the morning and staid around all day, rather than take a late trip to finish out his day's quota which would bring him back to the barn between midnight and 1 o'clock in the morning obtained an excuse to go home thus losing his day's full wage.

G ET a board half an inch thick, one foot wide, and about three feet long. Lay a steel garden rake on it in such a way that the head of the rake rests flat on the center of the board, and the handle sticks up nearly at right angles. Take three staples of galvanized wire, such as are used to fasten wire fencing to the posts, and drive them through the board so that each will enclose one tooth of the rake. Let two of the staples grip the two outside teeth near the top, and the third hold one of the intermediate teeth near the point. The board will then be less likely to split. Clinch the points on the back.

By driving the rake teeth sharply down as far as they will go into the staples, you will have a handy tool with which to push or rake large masses of autumn leaves on your lawn; or to clear winter paths. A slight upward tap will instantly detach the board, and leave your rake free for ordinary uses.

Party Enrollment

I am opposed to the provisions of the direct or primary law which call for citizens to become enrolled in a political party upon primary day. I believe that a series of ballots should be presented to the voter and he be permitted to make his choice of which ballot he shall make his selection of candidates from and that he should have the privilege of doing this secretly without disclosing his party affiliations.

I believe that political conventions should be held before, and not after, primary election.

I would go a step further, and provide that no name should be allowed upon the primary ballot as representative of any political party unless the person at the time of filing his nomination papers ac- Board of Labor and Industry knowledges in writing that he believes in the principles enunciated by the political party whose designation he chooses.

ROAD DELEGATES LABOR MEN SEEK BETTER HOUSING

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.-The Central has asked Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston to name three delegates to attend sessions of the congress at Detroit the week of and create a city planning commissi in accordance with the "homestead act."

The delegates to the Central Labor Union are of the unanimous opinion that a commission of this kind in this city would do a great deal of good. There is more provision should be made in the suburban districts for the housing of working people and that the city should make the conditions in these sections as ideal as possible.

During the past year, the school had, besides its regular football team, four basketball teams and three baseball teams, all playing regular schedules, thus insuring the participation of a large number of boys in athletic activities.

LOCATION

ON SHIPPAN POINT. THE WATER OF LONG ISLAND SOUND. A wonderful combination of seashore and country. Every room in the main building commands a view of the water. Fifteen acres of lawn, garden and orchard. The beauty of its situation is in itself an inspiration.

BUILDINGS

BEAUTIFUL modern dor-mitory, with running hot and cold water in every sleeping room. Gymnasium, 100 x 50 feet, with basketball courts, bowling alleys, etc. School building with large study hall, class rooms, chemical and physical laboratory, manual training shops, etc. Large and attractive cottage for a limited number of younger boys.

THE school offers a real home to its pupils. The institutional atmosphere is noticeably absent. A spirit of friendliness permeates the entire school, and everyone is made to feel at home. This is greatly enhanced by the close association of pupil and teacher. "Harmonious" and "homelike" are the terms most frequently applied by those who visit the school.

MORAL TRAINING

THIS school honestly endeavors to impart to its pupils the fundamentals of right living. It aims to give to every boy the instruction which most parents fail to give; it seeks to keep in close touch with the mental and moral development of its charges; it stands ready to help a boy fight his battles, to counsel and to instruct, to warn and to advise. By an intimate understanding of boy problems and a sympathy with the problems of boy life, it endeavors to deserve the confidence of every pupil, young or old, and to stand by him in distress, to be patient with him in defeat, and to rejoice with him in victory.

RESULTS

MANOR graduates are today in all the leading colleges of the ceuntry. Some of them have gained distinction for high scholarship or along literary lines; some have made their mark athletically; practically all have gained recognition as earnest, capable young men. Harvard has received more of our graduates than any other college. Yale, Princeton, Columbia, University of Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Dartmouth, Amherst, Leland Stanford and other leading colleges and universities can attest the effectiveness of our methods. In business, too, many former pupils are occupying positions of trust and responsibility.

Persons desirous of becoming competent and successful Accountants, Book-keepers, Stenographers, Secretaries, or Commercial Teachers, with assurance of employment, will find in the

GRANBY MAKES GAIN

With the exception of a little activity here and there among the specialties the securities markets were somewhat apathetic this morning. Opening prices were a shade under Saturday's closing and further losses occurred during the first sales. However, trading was very light and price movements were without much significance.

The most interest was centered in the petroleum stocks. California Petroleum and Mexican Petroleum showed good early gains. Pressed Steel Car was Price changes were somewhat mixed on the local exchange. Further weakness was early shown by New Haven.

Fluctuations continued very irregular throughout the first half of the session. California Petroleum opened off 1/2 at 24% and advanced to 27. Mexican Petroleum opened at 63 and advanced 31/2 points before midday.

NEW RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION FOR ALBERTA

Contractors Say That Work Is Likely to Be Continued for Many Years-Many Hitherto Isolated Districts Opened Up

LAST YEAR'S RESULTS

EDMONTON, Alta.-Railway building is one of the chief industries in Alberta. as well as throughout western Canada. The fight for territory is strenuous, and, as a consequence, millions of dollars are being expended upon improvements and betterments. The doors of many iso lated districts are being opened, rural communities are established, new towns forced to grow and cities made to expand. Contractors say this work will not be curtailed until the western country is completely gridironed, which may be interpreted to mean that the development will continue for many years.

More than three miles of rails were laid daily in Alberta last year, the total mileage being 955, or more steel than was put down in all the other provinces combined. Official reports show that the province had 3055 miles of railway lines at the close of 1912, as follows: Canadian Pacific, 1470; Canadian Northern, 912; Grand Trunk Pacific, 638; Edmonton, Dunvegan & British Columbia, 25. From the same sources it is learned that 491 miles of grade were completed last year, as follows: Canadian Northern 319, Canadian Pacific 117, Grand Trunk Pacific 37, Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia 18.

Statistics furnished by the companies show that Alberta had 807 miles of railway lines in 1883, from which year until 1900 only one mile was added. Eight miles of line were talen out in 1903, but since that time the growth has been rapid and substantial. There were 1060 miles of lines in operation at the close of 1905, in which year the province of Alberta was organized. Since then the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern have pushed their rails into Wis Cent 4s the various parts of this territory. As an indication of the vast amount 26% of construction work carried on by the 2814 railroads in Alberta and throughout western Canada, it is interesting to learn from M. H. McLeod, general manager of the Canadian Northern Railway Company, that 1000 miles of lines in this province will be in operation before the end of the year. "The next five years," he added, "will be the most active so far as railway construction is concerned, that the prairie provinces have vet witnessed." The three transcontinental railway companies distribute more than $1,250,000 annually in the form of wages to employes living in and near Edmonton. This amount will be materially increased with the completion of the lines westward to the Pacific coast. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company, it was reported some time ago, is planning to build one of its three new lines from Winnipeg westward through 01% 101% 101% Edmonton crossing the Rockies by one of the northern passes, thence through com- Oct11.37 11.40 11.37 11.40 11.47 11.40 11.42 95% 93% 93% petitive territory and to a point on the

NEW YORK BONDS INTEREST IS CENTERED IN CALL LOANS

Tendency in Rates Seems to Be Upward as Currency Shipments to Interior Are Well Under Way-New York Statement

LOCAL MARKET OUIET

All interest in the money market now centers on the course of call loan rates. For a day or two rates have been on the edge of advancing but it will need sharp impetus from New York, unless the present slight demand enlarges, to change conditions, Of course this is the time of year when call money might ordinarily be expected to move up. Then again there has been an abnormally large spread between call and time money which has yet to be closed up, the fact being that brokerage houses have been getting cheap money more because there has been so little speculative demand rather than because fundamental money con-

15 ditions dictate it. Last week saw call money in New York touch 41/2 per cent—for a day only to be sure—but that quotation nevertheless was the highest for September in the past decade except for 1906, 1907 and 1912. Considering the fact that currency shipments to the interior are al-10% ready under way, and that in the natural course of events further heavy shipments should take place from New York this week, the complexion of the call money market takes on a little more signifi-

The surplus of the New York clearing

Inasmuch as a deficit in the New York bank statement was expected and failed to appear, Saturday's report was quite satisfactory. The clearing house statement shows that the banks managed to hold their ground pretty well. They were able to accomplish a good deal toward the end of the week through the calling of loans, and the higher rates for call money brought outside institutions into the market, so that there was quite a helpful shifting of commitments. The result is strikingly shown in a comparison between the average and actual figures. The average indicated an increase in loans of $17,721,000, but in the actual loans decreased $10,157,000. This proves the contention of some bankers who were buying commercial paper during the week that the increase in the loan item was only temporary. Cash holdings, which were decreased $8,852,000 in the average, were only decreased $5,038,000 in the actual, which reflected in a measure the return of funds withdrawn locally on the occasion of the first of the month payments. In consequence of these favorable tendencies the actual surplus reserve was greatest year in the history of railway It was cabled that Russia and Canada are reduced only $457,750, leaving that item at $4,631,350, instead of a deficit, as looked for at one time.

GRASMERE, England-It may be difficult to estimate correctly all the causes which have led to the decline of so many of the famous athletic gatherings of England and Scotland, but some of them are obvious at a glance. Many of these gatherings have lost their local character and therefore their local interest, and they have suffered also from the commercializing of sport. One finds in the ring a number of professional athletes, drawn from all parts of the country solely by the money prizes which are offered, and outside the ring a crowd of apathetic people wro are there because they have a holiday and there is nowhere else to go, and who have to consult their programs in order to know the names of the competitors. THE HOME FORUM

Courtesy From and to the Street Car Men

The courtesy, kindness and even culture of Boston street car conductors and motor men is fairly a proverb. And now from Columbus, O., comes news which shows that no one city has a monopoly of street car courtesy. To 660 motor men and conductors were presented lately an artistic bronze medallion on a black leather strap to serve as a watch fob and also a motto. On the face of the medallion are the words, "Safety first;" on the back, "Be patient, courteous and attentive." It is remarked in connection with the story of this gift to employees that; there has been carried on a campaign of education in Columbus, to induce the public to see the railway service men rightly as well as to make the men to understand their own position. To scold one conductor because another has given one the wrong transfer is unreasonable. The man who gave it may have been rushed and he is always responsible for many things. Certainly the man to whom it is presented is guiltless, and must obey his orders, which, of course, are to accept only the proper check. It is astonishing how seldom one gets the wrong change on the street cars, and the mistake is quite as likely to be in favor of the passenger as of the conductor. Therefore, the passenger may well occupy himself with the motto of the Columbus street railway men if by chance he does find the handful of silver something short. His manner need not topographical monographs which Hinecessary for their purpose, do crop up and Brentwood and elsewhere. But the shortnesses may be longer than one, two mistakes can never be added together aright.

America and Hindu Students

IN THE bulletin which Hindu students in colleges and universities of the United States have begun to publish the reflective reader finds much new information about a movement of considerable significance both because of its motives and its proportions. The names are given of at least twenty-five men who last June received the degree of B. A. from some of the finest institutions of the country. Several of these Hindus have held prominent positions in the cosmopolitan clubs. They are beginning to appear at the many student conferences, religious and cducational, which are characteristic of American educational evolution on its social side. In short, to Japanese, Chinese and Korean representatives of Asia, Americans are now adding natives of India as pupils in schools and colleges and as students of American democracy; and judging by the tenor of the communications published in the bulletin of the Hindustan Association, the hosts thus far have made a favorable impression upon their foreign guests.

These communications also indicate that their Hindu writers seldom contemplate permanent residence in the Occident. Western sciences, industries and methods of government are to be studied, but not for self-aggrandizement. The chief end is to prepare to render effective service to the "mother land." Taking advantage of freedom of speech as well as freedom of thought, America is to be an arena for discussion by Indians of all faiths and grades as to how the India of tomorrow may best be modernized without surrendering the permanently valuable wealth of the past.

Should the exodus of Hindus from the east to the American educational institutions take on anything like the proportions hinted at in this bulletin or intimated by the growth of registration during recent years, the effect of the process on subsequent Indian history might be something like that on Japan and China of their youths' contact with the United States.

That so many of the Hindus who already have won academic degrees in the United States have specialized in physics, chemistry, agriculture, electrical and mechanical engineering and sociology, is significant. Returning home they will at once join and lead in that process of industrial and economic uplift which is characteristic of contemporary India.

To a greater extent than has been the case with other Asiatic students in the United States, the Hindus seem to make it a matter of personal adventure. They come more dependent on labor for support while they study. They have no government backing as have most of the Chinese, and they represent a less wealthy stratum of society than do most of the Japanese.

ONE of the very latest inventions is that of growing lawn grass on such a foundation that it can be handled as a carpet or a rug. This may enable the sensitive commuter to take his lawn into the house in strips of an evening and clip it, without exciting the curiosity of, or inviting comment from, his neighbors. It is possible, however, that his wife may ask him during his vacation to shake the lawn.

CANADA is watching with great interest the launching of an agricultural credit bank in the province of Saskatchewan. It might be said without exaggeration that interest in the experiment extends into the United States.

Cooperative
Buying
in Philadelphia

ON THE FACE of the statements issued, it would seem that the cooperative system of buying has been carried to success in Philadelphia. Those engaged in it are 8000 of the 10,000 employees of the Rapid Transit Company. It does not appear that the organization operates its own supply houses, but, rather, depends upon the ability and willingness of grocers, butchers, bakers and merchants in general to accept its coupons in payment for articles purchased. Thus, at the outset, it avoids responsibilities, as well as investment, such as have proved too great a load for many cooperative enterprises. But at the same time, in dealing with the general merchant, it forfeits a profit which has helped to swell the earnings of many successful cooperative companies. The wide departures in method often noticeable in cooperative undertakings serve to prove that the system, to be successful, must be adapted to special conditions and peculiar needs.

In the present instance, 100 stores, scattered through the city, accept the cash coupons issued by the cooperative society at their face value. Cash coupon books are easily obtainable and they contain coupons to the value of $2.50, $5 and $10. Books of the purchasing value of $2.50 are sold for $2.30, those of the $5 value for $4.60, and those of the $10 value for $9.20—or at a uniform saving to the members of 8 per cent. It is stated that the purchases made by families in the society aggregate $4,000,000 per annum.

It is interesting as well as significant that arrangements have been made by the managers of this association whereby merchants , in various districts of the city, and in various lines, shall hereafter accept the coupons on the same terms as the 100 stores already available. From this the inference may be drawn that in consideration of the steadiness and volume of the custom promised, the merchants are willing to allow the 8 per cent discount. On this basis, if the society, as appears, operates no supply stores of its own, it becomes simply a cooperative purchasing agency, and its energies must be directed toward seeing that its members share in a real rather than apparent profit from their coupon book discounts. They are to a very large measure assured of this by reason of the fact that they may buy with coupons as they would with cash. That profitable cooperation is possible has been thoroughly demonstrated. It seems to be necessary, however, to determine wisely just what plan will best meet the requirements of the particular community and class which the system is expected to serve.

The news from Mongolia continues to be in the highest degree unreliable. Whether from Chinese or Russian sources, it is quite evident to those who know anything of the situation that, whether the news has any foundation in fact or not, it is obviously colored to bring it into line with the exigencies of the politics of St. Petersburg or Peking. The latest telegram from Urga, emanating from St. Petersburg, which states that the hutukhtu has issued an ordinance uniting south and north Mongolia, and has instructed the Mongolian commanders to protect the lives and property of peaceful Chinese, to reopen the Urga-Kalgan trade route, and to enter into friendly relations with Manchuria, is too obviously inspired by policy to command serious attention

It is hardly necessary to point out that the hutukhtu has no authority to unite south and north Mongolia, and no means of enforcing such authority if he had it. The ordinance is just about as much effective in bringing about any union between the two districts as the edict of some highland chief, uniting England and Scotland, would have had 300 years ago. The telegram in question goes on to state that the Mongolian government has also promised the Chinese merchants that it will give military protection to caravans coming from China. It is again hardly necessary to point out that there is really no such thing as the Mongolian government, that Mongolia is peopled by independent tribes whose chiefs owe no real allegiance to any authority, and that in Mongolia today there is no more national consciousness than there is in Albania, or than there was in Scotland 300 years ago.

What is really happening in Mongolia is a question difficult indeed to answer. It is doubtful whether it could be answered in Peking. It is almost certain it could not be answered in St. Petersburg. Russian policy in Mongolia is in the hands of the military adventurer. Like so many outlying districts which border on the Muscovite belt across the old world, this great division of the old Chinese empire is but a field for Russian experiment, for spasmodic military adventure fathered by St. Petersburg if successful, repudiated if a failure. There is no policy, as far as St. Petersburg is concerned, save the policy of opportunism, and there is only one thing certain in regard to the whole matter, and that is that when the "Mongolian government" issues an edict the original draft is in Russian.

Billboard and Other Outdoor Advertising It is observable in the comments occasioned by the report of the New York billboard commission to the mayor that in some quarters the recommendations seem to go too far; in others that they do not go quite far enough. The commission would prohibit all outdoor advertising except shop signs in the neighborhood of parks, public buildings and streets of exceptional character, and it would abolish all flashing electric signs in or near residence districts. It would also limit the size of outside advertisements, regulate advertisements on subway and elevated railway stations, prohibit roof signs in residence districts, provide a censor for the wording of outdoor advertising, and levy a tax upon it.

There are many thousands of people, as there are many newspapers, with no special fondness for outdoor advertising as it is generally understood, that are as adverse to too much regulation as they are to too much license. It must be admitted that if the outdoor advertisement has some very radical and uncompromising opponents at this time, it is because it has gone to an intolerable extreme. Despite moderate protests and friendly counsel, it has continued to intrude upon private rights and public property until it has aroused, perhaps, here and there, an unreasoning antagonistic sentiment. It has done worse than this from the standpoint of its own welfare—it has created the impression that it cannot be regulated if permitted at all, unless, indeed, it be regulated with a view to its suppression.

In these circumstances it would seem that advertising interests controlling the billboard, the electric sign, the railway station, street car, elevated, subway and other mediums in this general class, would do well to give serious thought to the situation they have themselves created, and with the purpose of bringing about conditions that will be less obnoxious to the public. Manifestly, the present widespread protest against certain forms of outdoor advertising has substantial popular backing. Before the outdoor advertisement interests go far in denunciation of the radicalism of the reformers they might well begin taking steps to make this radicalism inexcusable.

Before the present year is over those who like to take long-distance trolley excursions, just to see how far they may travel by electricity in any given direction, can go a great deal farther than ever before. Many links have been supplied in the cross-country routes, and some very important extensions east, west and south are nearing completion.

THE novel is not the marketable form of literary property that it used to be, as not a few authors who rely upon it for income are finding out. In the first place, relatively speaking, books are not being read as much as they used to be, not even for pleasure. The staged play, the motion picture, the illustrated periodical, the pageant and the dance, the touring car, golf and a thousand and one things that allure are arrayed against the story writer, at least during all save the winter months. Moreover there is the public library to be reckoned with, which, whatever its effect on the number of persons reading a story, does not conduce to multiplication of buyers, and this is the important detail from the royalty standpoint.

Fiction

and Its

Authors'

Rewards

Nor is this all. Cheap and prompt reprints of stories by popular favorites and attractive and inexpensive new editions of standard fiction are hostile to the pecuniary success of stories by artists who cater to the few rather than to the many, and who, even under former more favorable conditions, never were tempted by hope of large royalties into becoming mere "book carpenters."

On the other hand the author of a work of fiction today, if the story has certain qualities, may count on new forms of income from it, which, in many cases, will more than make up for any shrinking of income on the basis of books sold. With dramatic and cinematograph royalties added to income from serial publication and from books sold, there are not a few British and American novelists of prominence, who, from one book a year, derive an annual income which only the upper stratum of professional men approach. If this exemption from the necessity of hasty and crude work and this opportunity to brood over both form and content of a tale are utilized as they should be by writers of fiction the world of hterature may be a gainer in classics. The temptation, however, will be to coin revenue from new as well as old sources of income, and as rapidly as possible. Those who thus succumb will betray their art for ducats.

Nothing shows the powerlessness of the great powers and the conflicting selfishness of their individual aims more than the fact that the European press is at the present moment engaged in seriously discussing the question as to whether it is their intention to remove the Turk from Adrianople or not. Enver Bey, the paladin of the Muhammadan party, has taken repossession of the city at the head of the Ottoman troops, and simply

While the Turk Holds Adrianople declares his intention of holding it against all comers, or going down in the breach, as the Emperor of the eastern empire went down in the breach when Constantinople was stormed some five centuries ago.

A very different man to Enver Bey, Djavid Bey, has been putting the reason for holding it in a quite different way. The peace of Europe, Djavid Bey tells us, necessitates the holding of Adrianople by the Turk, since only in this way can a strategic frontier be discovered which will prevent the ambitions of the Bulgar from jeopardizing the peace of Europe by a new advance against Constantinople. What, however, Europe undoubtedly feels in the matter is that though Enver Bey is no doubt absolutely sincere in his conviction and determination, and though Djavid Bey may be diplomatically making the best case possible for the Porte, it is neither the devotion of the one nor the dexterity of the other which is keeping the crescent floating over the second city of the empire, but the absolute inability of the great powers to reconcile their private aims, and their disinclination to move when those private aims are not directly affected.

but the absolute inability of the great powers to reconcile their private aims, and their disinclination to move when those private aims are not directly affected.

The simple fact is that, treaty of London on treaty of London, there are certain powers which would not be in the least averse from Turkey remaining in Adrianople. The United Kingdom, as the greatest Muhammadan power in the world, would not probably be bitterly disappointed if the fall of the Turk could be broken at Adrianople instead of at the Enos-Midia line. The government in Berlin, which has for many years maintained the most cordial relations with the Sublime Porte, would not be likely to put any obstacles in the way of a rehabilitation of the influence which Marschall von Bieberstein once exercised on the Bosphorus. The diplomacy of Russia, though it is fairly tortuous, is commonly not difficult to comprehend, and a boundary which kept Bulgaria outside the line comprehend, and a boundary which kept Bulgaria outside the line of the Maritza and Adrianople would keep her just that much further from a successful dash, at a later period, into Constantinople. It is not probable that either Austria or Italy has any particular feeling in the matter. Austria and Italy are indeed at the moment far more opposed to the claims of Greece and Servia than to those of Constantinople. There remains France, and France, without any particular policy on the subject, is always friendly to the wishes of Russia. The one hope, probably, of the Bulgarian people is, consequently, that the great powers in general and the government in St. Petersburg in particular may come to the conclusion that there is more to be gained in favoring Christian feeling in the Balkans than in supporting the more or less smiling Ottoman defiance of the intentions of the treaty of London.

Analysis of the lists of plays to be given by British and American actors before American audiences this season makes apparent an unusual number of renderings of Shakespeare's tragedies, comedies, and histories cast in dramatic form. Managers, at least, do not seem to be taking the master artist at the low rating put upon him by Voltaire, Walt Whitman and G. Bernard Shaw. Modern realism has yet to show itself the audi-

Bard of Avon a Present Interest ence-winner that the romanticism and idealism either of the past or the present prove to be when a direct appeal is made to the people on terms that the masses can meet. Judged by no higher test than box-office receipts, there is no greater playwright than he who wrote both "Hamlet" and the "Comedy of Errors."

When the unquenchable vitality of this classic dramatic literature is contemplated, it brings reassurance at a time when so much of contemporary playwrights' work offends either by its crudeness of form or its vulgarity of tone. In pursuit of liberty some writers seem unable to distinguish between liberty and license. Witness then such plays as have forced from the press of New York city during the past week almost unanimous condemnation of the lowered social ideals of which they are typical.

Quite apart, then, from any satisfaction which the man of taste and loyalty to classic traditions may take in the frequency with which Shakespearean plays may be seen this season, is the satisfaction which the moralist, also, may have in the same fact. There are, at least, to be occasional engagements where investment of cash will bring in returns that inspire rather than degrade.

While we are on this theme it may be opportune for us to note that ere long, owing to the cooperation of some of the finest of English players, "Hamlet," at least, is to be brought within the ken of the multitudes that resort to motion picture shows of the better sort.

A PRACTICAL lesson in modern industry and finance is to be found in the fact that the national bank deposits of Indiana fell off $2,320,082 since June 4 last. How is it explained? The money was needed to move the crops.

Notwithstanding periodical attacks on whitewashing, 3,529,-462 long tons of lime were produced in the United States last year. But this only serves to show that the country knows how to discriminate
